ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This report was initially compiled in 1995–6 from field surveys of all historic cemeteries on Fort Bragg, Camp Mackall and Pope Air Force Base using the original Fort Bragg cemetery survey (Harris & Holmes, n.d.) as a guide. The original survey was an ongoing project throughout the 1960s and 1970s directed by two Department of the Army career civil servants, Kenneth W. Harris and Thomas N. Holmes. Prior to their work, an unidentified Fort Bragg unit developed a partial list of interments. William H. Kern, Environmental Officer with the Directorate of Public Works Business Center (PWBC), conducted field checks and re-edited the original survey report. Beverly A. Boyko, Curator with the Fort Bragg Cultural Resources Program, conducted field checks, photographed each marker, mapped the cemeteries and compiled the final first edition document (Boyko and Kern 1997). Wayne C. J. Boyko, Fort Bragg Cultural Resources Manager, assisted with field checks and edited the final report. Marie W. McCollough assisted with typing and formatting the document and Jeff Linklinder assisted with drafting the cemetery maps. Waverly T. McLeod Sr., researched Civil War veterans buried on Fort Bragg. David W. George, Jennifer R. Hall, Joel M. Howard, Mark K. Jones, and Tony W. Page used a Global Positioning System (GPS) to locate the cemeteries accurately, and prepared the installation map of cemetery locations. John J. Rose, Post Architect, and Dr. Ruth Little, architectural historian with Longleaf Historic Resources of Raleigh, were consulted on the motifs and shapes used for cemetery monuments. Dr. Jamie MacDonald translated the Gaelic epitaph (see Long Street 205). Arlene H. Baker requisitioned Veterans Administration (VA) memorial markers for Civil War soldiers. Frederick W. Browne, William H. Kern, Waverly T. McLeod Sr., Waverley T. McLeod Jr., Larry D. Pace and Joseph J. Stancar placed the VA memorials honoring Union and Confederate soldiers at various cemeteries on the installation. Dr. Linda F. Carnes-McNaughton, Curator and Historical Archaeologist (Fort Bragg CRMP), is currently the POC for historic cemeteries (910-396-6680). At present, Jennifer Friend and Matt Mirarchi, ORISE/USAEC interns, assist with cemetery monitoring tasks.

NOTE: The names of two historic cemeteries were changed in the seventh edition (Boyko and Kern 2007). The Muse Cemetery is now correctly called the Keyser Cemetery (located on Camp Mackall), and the cemetery previously referred to as the Keyser Cemetery (located on private land adjacent to Camp Mackall) is now referred to as an Unnamed Cemetery, North Carolina site number 31MR240. Charles Heath, Staff Archaeologist with the Fort Bragg CRMP, corrected and/or updated information on Civil War soldiers buried or otherwise memorialized on Fort Bragg and Camp Mackall for the eighth edition (Boyko and Kern 2008). Updates are also included for those cemeteries with recent interments and fence upgrades. A new map for Stinson Cemetery is also included in this new edition. With the exception of Austin and Ellis cemeteries, a new 100 ft protective buffer has been installed at each cemetery (2010).

The support of the soldiers and civilians of the XVIII Airborne Corps and Fort Bragg who have worked to preserve these treasures of the North Carolina Sandhills is gratefully acknowledged.

INTRODUCTION

This is a listing of church, family and military cemeteries and all memorial markers (with the exception of the Fort Bragg Main Post Cemetery) located on Fort Bragg, Camp Mackall and Pope Air Force Base, North Carolina. The cemeteries are listed alphabetically by county followed by the memorials, also listed alphabetically by county. The church, military service, location or surname of the oldest identified burial is used to identify the cemetery. Other names by which the cemetery may have been known are listed within parentheses, followed by the North Carolina township and county in which the cemetery is located. The year of the earliest and the most recent known interment, or military action are listed last. Where the date of the interment(s) was not known, a reasonable estimate was made. A descriptive paragraph for each cemetery includes: environment (wooded or cleared); first and last interments and a physical description (fence, signage, size, number of markers, grave orientations).

Each marker is described including material type, top type, base type, decorative motif and damage or erosion documented in 1995-1996 (see Appendix A). Unless otherwise noted, all markers are upright tablet stones, with matching footstones. On report maps, the graves are always oriented east-west and on the east side of the head marker. In the text, the headstone epitaph transcript is justified against the left margin, although this does not reflect the actual line justification found on the stone. The military service if applicable is recorded to the right of the epitaph but may not appear on the stone. The initials (if any) of the footstone are right justified on the first line of the headstone epitaph text. Care was taken to note actual capital letters, line breaks and punctuation. Epitaph font types, super and sub-scripts and line justifications were not recorded. The name and business location of the craftsman who made the memorial occasionally follows the last line, and was indented from the left margin. A blank line indicates where lettering is illegible or missing. Parentheses surround lettering that is obvious but illegible or missing. The field recorders followed a serpentine path down the rows of graves. The inscriptions are listed in that order; right to left, then left to right, and so on. For the larger or more complex cemeteries, a marker number was assigned to each grave. If applicable this is indicated in bold type at the beginning of the marker description.

Family cemeteries and the church yards at the Long Street and Sandy Grove Presbyterian Churches are maintained by the U.S. Army under the terms of land acquisition agreements negotiated with the original owners. All cemeteries are fenced and are not used for military training activities. Cemeteries are mowed with minor repairs accomplished by the Directorate of Public Works and Cultural Resources Management Program.

Most military burials on the post resulted from combat operations, which occurred here in 1781 and 1865, or are the graves of Civil War soldiers who were killed during the war. Information used to identify Civil War veterans in the North Carolina Troop Rosters was name, age, birth county, and whether or not they survived the war. If the information in the troop roster matched the known information for the individual it was assumed to be the same person. Additional research conducted by Heath (2009) has been integrated in this edition.

Also included are markers for veterans of the Spanish American War and WWII which had been stolen and dumped on Fort Bragg and now rest at Sandy Grove Church. All of the Civil War graves of Union soldiers on this post which could be located accurately through informant interviews were marked by the U.S. Army in 1921 (Nye n.d. p. 45). Standard headstones provided by the Veterans Administration, now the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs (VA), were used to mark these graves. From 1992 until 1995 the U.S. Army placed memorial markers in the vicinity of a number of historic military graves for which only general locations were known (Corps of Engineers 1943; Kern per. comm. 1995). They include one mass grave from the Revolutionary War, and a number of Union and Confederate graves from the Civil War. Note these markers are memorials, not graves, and were placed in the general area or the nearest known cemetery as indicated by the Corps of Engineer's 1943 map of grave locations on Ft. Bragg. The Army's intent is to memorialize American soldiers known to be interred in these general areas. Memorial markers may be moved as necessary in order to support military construction, training or range management programs.

Stonecutters whose work can be found on Fort Bragg and whose names are included in this survey are: A. Sweetland; A. Foster; Jos. Foster, Fayetteville; Lauder, Fayetteville; Remsburg, and E.L. Remsburg, Fayetteville; Cooper's, Raleigh; C. M. Walsh, Petersburg, Va., and W.C. Berryhill, Charlotte. The marble these artists used in their work was procured from Europe or from Elberton, Georgia, a common source of marble since the 1930s. The Elberton marble has a characteristic coarse grain and is referred to in this survey as Georgia marble. Another material well represented in this survey is a red-brown sandstone that may have been quarried from either the only known sandstone quarry in the area on the Cape Fear near Tokey, North Carolina or from local outcroppings (Little 1984), several of which are known on Fort Bragg (e.g. Blue's mountain, Gaddy's Mountain, and Monroe Mountain).

Sandstone was the only stone material available to local craftsmen in the late 18th and early 19th centuries. Several sandstone markers in this survey exhibit a similar style and were probably produced by the same individual identified in Little (1984) as the "Upper Cape Fear Master". Although his identity is unknown, his hand carved stones with their Baroque shape (serpentine and round-on-flat, see Appendix A), ruled lettering and references to the patron as well as the deceased are unique. Some of the more crudely worked sandstone markers were likely cut by family members of the deceased.

Sandstone was largely replaced by marble or wood, and local craftsmen by professional stonecutters in the early part of the 19th century, when the local population had grown enough to support a professional stonecutter. From the 1820s through the 1840s Apollos Sweetland, David Anderson Jr. and James Foster were among several itinerant stonecutters who worked out of Fayetteville. These businessmen would procure shipments of stone and then advertise, sell, and produce grave markers until they ran out of supplies or customers. Often they would shift into a new market area when business in one area declined.

Lauder was the most prolific of all stonecutters represented in the cemeteries of Fort Bragg. His name appears on 54 headstones in this survey but he is probably responsible for a great many more. Lauder was an Edinburgh, Scotland stonecutter who came to North Carolina in the 1830s to work on the State Capitol. He established his business in Fayetteville in 1845 (Little 1984). Lauder used both American and imported marble, ranging in styles typical of each decade from the 1840s through the 1880s.

E. L. Remsburg apprenticed under Lauder and assumed the business in the 1880s (Little 1984). He continued with some of Lauder's designs through the 1890s until he sold his business to I.V. Hooper, who in turn was bought out by Troy Cain around 1925. Four generations after Lauder established his business it is still in operation today as Cain Memorials (Little 1984).

W.G. Berryhill, Charlotte (1896) and Cooper's of Raleigh (1880 & 1884) were stonecutters who operated their businesses in the last two decades of the 19th century (Little pers. comm. 1995 [from Branson's Business Directory]).

The design, motifs and materials used by stonecutters are indicative of particular periods (see Appendix A). For example, the shield-like diamond shaped sandstone markers found at Long Street Presbyterian Church may be an 18th century continuance of a Scottish tradition which originated in the custom of inserting a slain warrior's shield into the grave as a memorial (Little 1984). The use of the phrase "Erected by ____" also is the continuation of a Scotch-Irish tradition (Little 1984). Small scale markers with serpentine or round-on-flat tops were popular in the 1840s. These Baroque styles gave way to the tall, thin rectangular markers in the 1850s. Such large markers were often decorated with calligraphy and/or variations of the urn and willow motif. By the 1860s these tall markers were commonly left undecorated. In the 1870s the markers were thickened and the tops usually a round or flat arch. Large beaded or molded borders and High Victorian Eastlake ornamentation such as the Crown and Cross, Broken Branch and Heavenly City motifs, were popular. By this period, the headstones were commonly inserted into a thick base. Fraternal symbols, references to military and civic service, Biblical verses and poetry were also often included on markers. Two words commonly found on a woman's marker may confuse the modern reader about a woman's relationship with her husband. These are "consort" meaning wife, and "relict" meaning widow. Children's markers were frequently decorated with carvings of a flowering branch cut from its tree or the stump of a sapling, each symbolic of a young life cut short.

Persons wishing to visit any of these cemeteries should first contact Fort Bragg's Public Affairs Office (PAO) to obtain permission. This may be done by telephoning the Cultural Resources Management Program (CRMP) office at (910) 396-6680 or by writing to the following address:

Department of the Army
Public Affairs Office AFZA-PA
Bldg. 2-1120
Macomb & Jackson St
Fort Bragg, NC 28310-5100

Visitors are cautioned that Fort Bragg and Camp Mackall are military reservations with active programs of field and weapons training as well as forest, wildlife and cultural resource management. Access to the training area is carefully controlled for reasons of both national security and public safety. All visits to cemeteries must be coordinated in advance with both the PAO and the CRMP. Escorts are required and arranged through the CRMP office.

Readers are strongly encouraged to submit corrections to this publication, report the location of any unlisted cemeteries located on these installations and to provide genealogical or biographical information about any of the individuals and families listed herein. This may be done by writing to the following address:

CUMBERLAND COUNTY

Ellis; Seventy-First Township, 1850 - 1918.

There are seventeen markers: the oldest being for John Ellis (1832-1850) and the most recent the infant son of Jesse and Fannie Ellis (1918). All headstones are east-facing with the footstones facing to the west. One new marker for Foster Ellis (#19), was set in an area of the cemetery which showed no interments on GPS radar. The marker was found nearby.

The presence of eleven other headstones and seven other footstones are indicated by the remaining fragments lying on the ground surface, for a total of thirteen head and fourteen footstones. The markers, looter holes, and marker fragments cover an area approximately 110'N/S and 35' E/W. There are two partial death dates: Neill McDonald who died in 19__ and an unidentified woman who died in 190_. Two birth dates are indicated: 1808 (Nancy McDonald) and 184_ (unidentified). The name "Lauder" is found on the bottom of one stone indicating the cemetery was in use while he was in business between 1845 and 1888. All of the markers are white marble with the headstones facing to the east and the footstones to the west. Measurements of this cemetery's stones were taken in an attempt to match up fragments (w=width, t=thickness).

McIntyre; Seventy-First Township, 1801-1869.

The cemetery is surrounded by a 3' high dry masonry sandstone wall approximately 50'x 20', with an entrance on the western side. Twenty graves are marked, the oldest being Alex McIntyre (1789-1801) and the most recent William McIntyre (1792-1869). All of the markers and footstones face to the west. A chain link fence surrounds the outer wall. Key access.

Newton, Seventy-First Township, 1884-1912.

This cemetery has also been known as Yadkin Road, Rocky Mount or Hill Church cemetery. There are at least 30 graves, 14 of which have stones with inscriptions. The earliest marked grave is that of Enoch Elijah Newton who died in the Civil War in 1863 and whose grave is marked with a VA headstone placed by his descendant, Anna Newton Turner during the 1960s (Newton Turner pers. comm. 1997). There is also a grave for Three Unknown US Soldiers marked by the U.S. Government at an unknown date prior to 1970 and replaced due to vandalism in 1993 (Kern pers. comm. 1995). These soldiers were identified by a descendant of George Newton, at whose home they were hospitalized, as Pvt. Thomas J. Malugean, Mortimer Mumford and Lt. John R. Fathera (Newton n.d. in a letter on file at Ft. Bragg DPWE). The earliest original headstone is that of an infant son of H.D. & L.A. Mints who died Sept. 9, 1884. The latest marked interment is that of Charity Winsbury (1842-1912). Several of the graves are marked by plain fieldstones (sandstone) without inscription. The headstones face to the west with the footstones usually facing east. The cemetery is named for the Newton family because of the large marker placed by their descendants, memorializing that family. A large cedar tree near Marker 1 was recently destroyed by fire and was subsequently removed.

1 Rough gray granite marker with a flat arch top and smoothed face with polished band on outside edge. The monument was erected by a Mr. Ben Newton of Williams of South Carolina sometime in the 1960s (Newton Turner pers. comm. 1997).

There are two markers on the east side of the cemetery and a small dirt road running around the boundary. Most of the markers are a fine grained, white marble with the headstones facing to the east and flat topped footstones with no initials. There are also many temporary metal markers, several grey granite markers and 1 possible wooden marker remnant for a total of 65 marked graves. Several other depressions and mounds left unmarked are also likely to be graves. The oldest marked grave is that of George McArthur (1824-1896) and the most recent Mrs. Anne Sparrow (August 2006). Three memorial markers were placed south of marker 37, in the Dobbins family row (# 70-72), and #73 is a new marker in place for Anne Sparrow. A new map of the cemetery is provided. The cemetery is also protected by a 6 ft tall chain link fence.

Taylor; Manchester Township, 1886-1941.

The cemetery is surrounded by an 8' high, 27'x 53' chain-link fence with chain and padlock. There are five marked graves. The earliest is for Penny Taylor (1816-1886) while the most recent is that of Sandy McKay (1874-1941). All of the low rectangular stones face to the west. The one upright marker has the family name on the east side. There are no footstones.

1 Gray granite, flat topped, rectangular shaped marker. This marker sits approximately 18" high and is rough with the exception of a smoothed top.

Thomas (Clark); Seventy-First Township, 1902-1942.

The approximately 36'x 27' cemetery is surrounded by two strands of barbed wire supported by 10 posts. There are three markers, the oldest being that of Joe Eller (1891-1902), the most recent (other than a soldier's memorial placed in 1993) is Flore Clark (1867-1942). There is a memorial marker here for an unknown Union soldier buried in the vicinity (Corps of Engineers 1943). All markers and footstones face east. Two temporary metal markers were recorded during the original survey. One of these was located on the ground on the east side of the cemetery.

Whitehead (Man & Wife); Seventy-First Township, 1905-1909.

One marker for two graves located in a wooded area. The first burial was for Moses Whitehead (1837-1905) who was joined by his wife Annie J. Chavis (1939-1909) four years later. The grave is surrounded by a 5x9' wooden fence of cement posts with two rails of 1x6 inch planks bolted onto the posts. A new 100 foot protective buffer has been installed around this burial plot.

1 White Georgia Marble lectern (approx. 4 1/2' high) with a beveled top set on a double low beveled base. The family name is inscribed on the second level of the base. A closed book is on the top surface and a band of floral design encircles the bottom of the lectern. The motif above the epitaph on the east side is a heavenly gate with a star top center. The top west side corners are chipped, as is the northeast corner of both base levels.

Austin; Johnsonville Township, 1891.

The cemetery is surrounded by a new (2009) wooden fence, with a gate, and encompassing an area of approximately 40' x 40'. New signage has also been installed. This cemetery is now part of a greenbelt located within the Picerne Housing development called Linden Oaks. Several pine and dogwood trees are growing within the cemetery fence. Six possible graves are evident as shallow depressions, only one grave (Philip Austin 1837-1891) is marked. One of the shallow depressions has been marked with broken fragments of a white ceramic vase. There is also a 4" x 8" burnt post in the SW corner of the cemetery which was probably a fence post as its long axis is oriented east-west, whereas a grave marker would be expected to be north-south.

1 Small, west facing, white marble marker with flat top. The footstone is also west facing with a flat top. The grave lies to the east of the headstone.

The cemetery is surrounded by two strands of barbed wire encompassing an area approximately 138' N/S by 132' E/W and is marked "OFF LIMITS" on the east side. A few pine and dogwood trees are located within the fenced area. There are 4 marble, 4 concrete, 5 fieldstone and 4 wooden markers indicating at least 13 graves (some of these may be foot markers). The oldest marked grave is Lucy Goins (1820-1902). The most recent grave is that of Becky Walden (1843-1929). Two markers made of cast concrete have unique inscriptions, possibly Native American symbols since the Goins family are of Native American ancestry (Goins 1981). All of the head and foot markers face to the west.

The back of the marker has four rectangular quartzite stones laid in the shape of a Christian cross that had a round milk glass lid at the center, the lid has been missing since 2003.. A fifth stone forms a base for the cross. A sandstone foot marker is carved with two symbols as shown facing away from the grave (east). These are; first, a cross having two cross bars with a circle as its base, second, a symbol resembling a mirror image of the letter Y lying on its side with the open arms of the Y facing to the right. A small field stone has been set at the base of each marker inside the grave area while a rectangular white marble stone has been set almost flush to the ground on the west side of the headstone. Long Street Presbyterian Church; Little River Township, 1773-1932.

This is a large cemetery with 232 identifiable graves. The cemetery is surrounded by a 3' high dry masonry stone wall encompassing an area approximately 250' N/S by 80' E/W. There are entrances on the eastern and northern sides. The church and cemetery are surrounded by a 4' high chain link fence with a padlocked gate. The earliest marked grave is that of Jaujin (Lauchlin?)McNeil (#226), 1773, while the most recent is that of M. Neil Buie (#11) who died in 1932. All headstones are east-facing and usually (unless noted) footstones are flat topped and face to the west.

The Reverend Angus McDiarmid (1758-1827), a former minister at Long Street, is interred here. The tombstone of Captain Angus McDiarmid (1832-1856), a native of the Island of Islay, Scotland is inscribed with an epitaph in Gaelic. This was the language of the early Scottish settlers. Captain Daniel A. Monroe (1829-1863) and First Sergeant Benjamin McLauchlin (1844-1862), Company K, 38th North Carolina Infantry Regiment, and many of the members of Company K are buried here. Captain John McKellar (1823-1877), Company A, 5th North Carolina Cavalry Regiment is interred here under a marker provided by his wartime comrades. Captain Alexander Ray (1828-1865), Company D, 53rd North Carolina Infantry Regiment, killed in action at Petersburg, Virginia, and other soldiers in his family are memorialized here.

A mass grave of approximately 30 Confederate soldiers is found here. These troops were either killed in action or died of wounds received at Monroe's Crossroads on 10 March 1865. Their remains were moved here after the Civil War (Nye, n.d.). The grave is marked by a simple white marble obelisk inscribed "Confederate Soldiers" placed by the women of Argyle in 1870 as a memorial not only to these, but also to men buried on other fields (McLeod, n.d.). In 1993 the U.S. Army added a memorial tablet to this grave (Kern pers. comm. 1995). Several other markers memorialize veterans of the Confederate Army. Rough gray granite memorial with a smooth beveled face set on a stone base. Located directly in front of and facing the church.

There are 8 marked graves (2 marble, 6 sandstone), the earliest being that of Charles M. Monroe (1812-1866), who was the owner of the farm where the Civil War Battle of Monroe's Crossroads was fought on 10 March 1865. The other marked stone is that of Sarah Monroe (1826-1892). Information on file at Fort Bragg's Real Property Planning Division indicates that three whites and seventeen blacks were buried here (Anonymous, n.d.). The entrance was probably in the southeast part of the cemetery where large stones have been placed on either side as steps over the wall. A large dead cedar is located to the immediate south of the interior stepping stone. The stone work of the wall has been damaged by a makeshift entrance in the northwest side. The head and footstones face to the west. The footstones are flat topped unless noted.

1 White marble marker with low serpentine top and hand pointing heavenward. The marker was inserted in a single low beveled base but now lies on the ground behind, face-up and broken in two places. A flat, rectangular gray granite VA marker with a Christian cross at top, center was added next to this marker in 1997 as a memorial to Israel D. Gaddy.

- 5-8 Four fieldstone head and footstones (adult) inserted in the ground. These stones are generally rectangular in shape except for the third set which has been roughly shaped to a round top headstone and flat top footstone.

Sandy Grove Presbyterian Church; Quewhiffle Township, 1859-1977.

The church and cemetery are surrounded by a 4' high chain link fence with padlocked gate. Most of the head and footstones face to the west. In 1923, 57 graves had tombstones and 91 others were marked with flat top cement markers for a total of 148 (Patterson & Carswell '25). All of the footstones are flat topped unless otherwise noted. Presently there are 214 marked graves. The earliest dated grave is Alexander Campbell (1817-1859). The last person to be buried here was Mary Chappell King Wright (1896-1977). Veterans of the Civil War buried here include 1st Lieutenant David J. Ray, Company B, 2nd Battalion, N.C. Troops; 3rd Lieutenant John N. McNeill, Company H, 46th N.C. Infantry Regiment; Private Lauchlin Alexander Blue (1837-1905), Company K, 38th N. C. Infantry Regiment, and several other Confederate Army veterans.

Smith-Campbell-Blue (Smith); Quewhiffle Township, 1838.

There are two markers, one of which marks the graves of four people. The earliest burial date, that of Randal Smith (1818-1838), is on this marker. There is a memorial marker here for an unknown Union soldier killed in the area (Corps of Engineers 1943). Both markers face to the west. The orientation of the four graves is unknown although the fence boundary would seem to indicate that they are on the west side of the marker. It is probable that the marker was added later and is in the general location of the graves. A new berm is proposed for protection here.

1 White marble obelisk with four gable top and an arch of ivy leaves on the top of each side. The marker is seated on a double beveled base. This marker has been badly damaged by weapons fire and several fragments lie on the ground while the top fragments are balanced in place. It is now protected from range fire by an earthen berm.

Smith (McKeithen); Quewhiffle Township, 1814-1866.

There are 21 marked graves with marble headstones facing to the east while the footstones face to the west. The earliest inscription is for Margaret Smith (1778-1814) while the most recent interment is that of Christian Smith (1816-1866). Two Revolutionary War patriots, Colonels Daniel and Patrick Smith are interred here. Daniel Smith served in the North Carolina Continental Line (pay vouchers of 1783 & 1792, on file Fort Bragg DPWE). Patrick Smith served in the North Carolina Militia (pay vouchers of 1782-3, on file Fort Bragg DPWE). There is also a memorial marker here for 3 unknown Union soldiers (Corps of Engineers 1943; Kern pers. comm. 1995). The cemetery is surrounded by a 51'x36' fence with two strands of barbed wire supported by 10 posts.

This cemetery is also known as Zion Wall Church, Preacher's Cemetery or Hadley Cemetery. The cemetery is surrounded by two strands of barbed wire fence encompassing an area approximately 60' x 40' with an "OFF LIMITS" sign on the west side. The east side of the fence is directly on or a few feet back from the road cut bank. There are woods on the other 3 sides and a dirt road running north-south about 10' to the west. There are 5 markers, but other unmarked burials are possible. The earliest is for Florie Wilson (1851-1901) and the most recent is that of Fannie Handon (1913-1915). There is a memorial marker here for an unknown Union soldier, placed in 1993 (Corps of Engineers 1943, Kern pers. comm. 1995). Unless noted, all of the head and footstones face to the east. Erosion abatement is underway along the roadway.

Unnamed Cemetery, 31MR240; Sandhills Township, ca. 1913.

The presence of at least 18 graves are indicated by depressions only. The cemetery encompasses an area approximately 325' x 195' but is not enclosed by a fence. The land (2 acres) for this cemetery may be an extension of the adjacent Wayne Community Church Cemetery, still in use. It may have served as the cemetery for members of nearby black church, ca. 1913 . It is not known when it was last used (King & Chapman 1994). This land is not on Fort Bragg and is privately owned.

Seven marble, one wooden and an unknown number of unmarked and fieldstone marked graves. A new fence surrounds the cemetery, recently cleared (June 1996). This cemetery is described in the deed transaction for the Whitehurst Tract (1985). The grave depressions are widely dispersed covering an area of at least 357' x 325'. The earliest marked stone is that of Hazel Muse (1906-1912) and the most recent is that of Martha Shipman (1922-1928). Although this cemetery dates to the time of the Campbell Homestead, none of the marked headstones are for members of the Campbell family. All of the headstones face to the west with the graves lying on the east side (King & Chapman 1994). A new map is planned for this cemetery.

Located on Pope Air Force Base, a small lectern shaped memorial monument of polished granite set on a granite base was placed in the park. The cemetery had at least twenty graves which were covered by the construction of the Army airfield during World War I (Daniel A. Monroe, letter to Mr. J. Allan Dunn, 1935, on file Fort Bragg DPW). The beveled top of the monument contains the following inscription:

A mass grave of approximately 30 Confederate soldiers is found here (grave 12). These troops were either killed in action or died of wounds received at Monroe's Crossroads on 10 March 1865. Their remains were moved here after the Civil War (Nye n.d.). The grave is marked by a simple white marble obelisk inscribed "Confederate Soldiers" placed by the women of Argyle in 1870 as a memorial not only to these, but also to men buried on other fields (Nye n.d.). In 1993 the U.S. Army added a memorial tablet to this grave (Kern pers. comm. 1995).

Monroe's Crossroads Battlefield; Quewhiffle Township, 1865.

Five burial areas (C, D, E, F, I as identified in Scott & Hunt 1995) contain the grave sites of at least 39 unknown Union soldiers as well as a number of unknown Confederate soldiers killed in action on 10 March 1865 during the Civil War. The remains of Confederate troops killed in the action were disinterred after the War, and moved to Long Street Presbyterian Church and other locations (Nye, n.d.). Approximately 100 soldiers are thought to have been killed in the engagement at Monroe's Crossroads which occurred when Confederate Lieutenant General Hampton's cavalry attacked an encampment of Union Brevet Major General Kilpatrick's cavalry.

The Union head stones mark 3 single graves (Burial Areas D,E,I), one mass grave of 9 soldiers (Burial Area F), and one mass grave site with 3 graves of 9 soldiers each (Burial Area C). The Union markers are undated although all of the graves date from the battle. The U.S. Government represented by Captain T.E. Haley placed markers on the graves in 1921. The position of the markers was determined by Mr. Neill S. Blue who was a boy of 15 at the time of the battle. Mr. Blue placed stones over the graves after the battle and pointed these out to Captain Haley who replaced them with the present markers (Nye, n.d.).

A circa 1923 photograph of Burial Area C depicts both the headstones installed in 1921 and large wood plank markers installed sometime after the Civil War. At the time of the March 10, 1865 battle, the battlefield area was part of Charles M. Monroe's plantation, "Rocky Mount". On his death in 1866, the property passed to Sarah Ann Monroe Gaddy, wife of Israel D. Gaddy. The sandstone outcropping for which the plantation was named (Rocky Mount) was later known as Gaddy's Mountain. An 1881 newspaper notice stated that Mrs. Gaddy routinely cared for several "neatly marked" grave plots scattered about the battlefield (Bauskett 1881).

Archaeological excavations conducted by the National Park Service in 1993 provided evidence that both Union and Confederate soldiers were buried in the largest common grave (Burial Area C).

Burial Area C

The grave area is 25'NW-SE x 41'NE-SW surrounded by a cable supported by 16 concrete pylons. The interior of the fence is covered with crushed white rock. Burial C is in a cleared area surrounded by woods on the top of a small knoll. Archaeological investigation in 1993 identified 3 possible graves - at the NE and NW corners and to the west of the SE marker. The NE grave appears to have had the body removed with only nails indicating that this may have once contained a coffin. Although no human remains were recovered (due to burial in highly acidic soil), the NW corner grave is thought to have contained one, possibly two, confederate soldiers due to the variety (both US and Confederate) of buttons recovered. Confederate soldiers are known to have been poorly supplied by the end of the war so it is highly likely that a confederate soldier would be wearing elements of both uniforms. A .44 caliber Colt revolver bullet and a piece of grape shot were also recovered from this grave. The third possible grave area to the west of the SE marker contained no artifacts to positively determine whether or not it was a grave (Scott & Hunt, 1995).

Three white marble VA markers with flat arch tops placed in 1921 (Nye, n.d.). The epitaphs are contained within a recessed and stippled Federal shield. These markers are located in the NW, NE and SE corners of the grave area.

APPENDIX B: MILITARY GRAVES

The following is a list of all military graves on Fort Bragg by cemetery followed by a section listing the individuals alphabetically by surname. With the exception of the Smith cemetery (Revolutionary War) and the two recovered stones (Spanish American and WWII), all of the military graves are a result of the Civil War. Information used to identify Civil War veterans in the North Carolina Troop Rosters was name, age, birth county, and whether or not they survived the war. If the information in the troop roster matched the known information for the individual it was assumed to be the same person. An asterisk denotes a memorial marker which is not an original grave marker, but a stone placed at a later date and not necessarily at the exact location of the burial. Brackets enclose the grave number where applicable. Notes on abbreviations follow the list.

The greatest portion of the Confederate veterans were members of Company K, 38th North Carolina Infantry Regiment ("The Carolina Boys"). Company K fought at Mechanicsville, Chancellorsville, and Gettysburg, and through the whole of the war (Wilderness, Petersburg) until the surrender of the Army of Northern Virginia at Appomattox Court House on 9 April 1865. Given the number of Carolina Boys killed-in-action, wounded, and lost due to terminal diseases, Company K experienced a 68% casualty loss by April 1865 (Heath 2009).

MILITARY GRAVES INDIVIDUAL INDEX

Most of the military burials on the post resulted from combat operations which occurred here in 1781 and 1865 or are the graves of Civil War soldiers who were killed during the war. Information used to identify Civil War veterans in the North Carolina Troop Rosters was name, age, birth county, and whether or not they survived the war. If the information in the troop roster matched the known information for the individual it was assumed to be the same person. Also included in this list are individuals who served during the American Revolution and WWII.

Information presented in heath (2009) was reviewed and used to both correct and update individual service data presented in previous editions of this report. For additional individual data see appendix C.

From 1992 until 1995 the U.S. Army placed memorial markers in the vicinity of a number of historic military graves for which only general locations were known (Corps of Engineers 1943; Kern pers. comm. 1995). Note these markers are memorials, not graves, and were placed in the general area or the nearest known cemetery as indicated by the Corps of Engineer's 1943 grave location map.

CEMETERYRY INDIVIDUAL INDEX

This is an index of all persons known to have been buried on what is now Fort Bragg or Pope AFB property. The information includes: surname, given name(s), lifespan, military unit (if applicable), and name of cemetery interred with marker number if applicable. Note that married women will be listed under their married names if their maiden name was not inscribed on the headstone. If the maiden name was inscribed, she is listed under both her maiden and married names. The information was collected from marked headstones and in a few cases marked footstones. Military units and the names of three "unknown" Civil War soldiers (FATHERA, Mumford and Maleugean) were added through secondary research of historical documents. This index does not include any information regarding numerous unmarked graves and graves which are marked only with an stone or wood markers not inscribed which are also found in many of the cemeteries included in this survey.
